

NME ELECTRICAL SERVICES LTD

For 20 years Northampton College has supported the training of more than 70 apprentices at NME Electrical Service Ltd. Working predominantly on new build developments across the Midlands, the Moulton Park-based business has been involved in the training of 50 per cent of its workforce through the apprenticeship scheme.

Andy Pell, Director at NME Electrical Service Ltd, said: “The apprenticeship scheme has helped us to shape our business with 50 per cent of our 100 electricians being trained through the programme.

“We currently have 16 electrical apprentices on the books and we are always impressed with the candidates that come through Northampton College who are hard-working and keen to learn.”

Not only supporting teenagers in their first career move, others entering the trade after a career change are also supported to succeed on the training scheme.

“Our apprentices are given a broad training across all electrical aspects associated with new housing developments including CCTV and car charging ports. Not only this, they learn valuable life skills such as communication skills, site management and how to organise themselves.

“We are committed to providing a high-quality service, so the apprenticeship programme provides us with the opportunity to organically grow the business and train our staff to our own high standards.”
